

Simple. Easy. Fun.

Imagine a state-of-the-art surround-sound home entertainment system with all the top-quality components for hours of audio and video pleasure, minus one essential ingredient: an easy way to use it. Electronics can be ridiculously complex these days—who hasn't been frustrated shuffling through multiple remotes just to turn on the TV? By having the right people design, install, and provide service for your system, the complicated work is taken care of. All that's left for you to do is enjoy.

Simple. Easy. Fun. That's the ultimate goal when it comes to the customer's experience, notes Jason Suttle, who established Constellation Home Electronics in 2000. With a lifelong interest in electronics, Suttle has worked in the field since 1990, and in Santa Fe since 1994. Last year his company doubled its installation and service staff and moved its design and production department to a significantly larger facility across from its North Guadalupe Street retail space. Now Constellation can provide even faster, more comprehensive service.

One popular way of cutting through the complexity of a home entertainment system is to use a single universal remote, custom-programmed by Constellation technicians. The company's experienced staff can help customers choose home automation, lighting control, security and alarm systems, home networking, home theater and satellite systems, and a range of other home electronics products—as well as provide all design, engineering, and installation services for both new and retrofit construction. “In the modern world, where so many kinds of electronics are completely affordable, the only thing standing between the average consumer and really enjoying these products is the professional service factor to make it all work for you,” Suttle says.

The logo features the word "Constellation" in a serif font, with a decorative arc of three dots above it. Below the name, the words "HOME ELECTRONICS" are written in a smaller, sans-serif font.

Constellation
HOME ELECTRONICS

215 North Guadalupe, Santa Fe NM 87501 • 505.983.9988 • simpleeasyfun.tv